There are millions of designers, developers, and doers - why am I special?

Or it could be my ability to identify an opportunity and pursue it - whether it's becoming a certified passenger safety technician to better serve clients or learning HTML and CSS to overhaul an organization's website- once I know of a problem I'm determined to solve it.

Maybe it's because I'm not afraid to admit what I don't know - I'm okay asking for help and the thought of learning something new is exciting - not intimidating!

It could be my devotion to social good. In five years and across three states, in small museums, crowded classrooms, and non-profit board meetings, I have been fighting for something better.

Maybe it's my interest in exploring multiple pathways (how we've always done things isn't the only way).

My Pillars

Community - know what you're not okay with and do what you can to change it.

Development - there's a lot to learn - get excited about it!

Design - don't just make something pretty. Make something inspiring.

My Mission

I'm on a mission to use my creative flair and technical skills to make my community - my world - better than I found it. I aspire to team up with an imaginative and weird group so that, together, we can help make folk's lives better.

My Skills

Web Development - HTML5, CSS3, JS, and more, coding sites from scratch and using CMS

Graphic & Web Design - created logos, dazzling flyers & responsive mockups - took ideas and gave them a face people could rally behind

UX - designed wireframes, ran usability tests, and conducted a competitive analysis to create delightful online experiences

Communication - I've worked with 8 year-olds, 80 year-olds, and everyone in between. I've partnered with life-long residents and folks brand new to the US - listening, learning, and code switching has been essential
